MA Media, Communications and Critical Practice 媒體、傳播分析與應用 文學碩士

(January 2018 Intake) - 16 Months

This MA Media, Communications and Critical Practice programme is offered by London College of Communications, a pioneering world leader in creative communications education for 120 years.

This Masters programme explores contemporary media and communications alongside the creative and professional practices that are central to the cultural industries. The course has been designed for postgraduate students considering a career in media, creative industry or the cultural sector, as well as those who want to work in research and education.

This programme will provide students with a systematic understanding of major theories of media and communications. Students will explore contemporary approaches to the media and creative industries and their social and economic contexts. Students will investigate how global and international perspectives, issues of diversity, equality and identity, and emergent environmental and ethical challenges relate to contemporary media production, circulation and consumption.

Graduates will be well suited to a range of careers in the media, communications or creative industries, as well as to research roles in the cultural and public sectors.

Host by: Steve Cross
